Learning Outcomes

In the left column explain the assignments and course attributes that will address the learning outcomes in the right column.

II. Flexible Core (18 credits)

Six three-credit liberal arts and sciences courses, with at least one course from each of the following five areas and no more than two courses in any discipline or interdisciplinary field.

B. U.S. Experience in its Diversity

A Flexible Core course must meet the three learning outcomes in the right column.

The class requires readings from multiple points of view and sources, including contemporary accounts of events including the Jazz Age, Great Depression, World War II, Civil Rights, the turbulent 1960s, the Cold War, the war on terrorism, and other issues in contemporary history. They are required to interpret and assess these sources through written assignments, essays, quizzes, examinations, and/or group work.

- Gather, interpret, and assess information from a variety of sources and points of view.

The writing assignments and/or the major exams assigned in the course require using several readings and critically evaluating different arguments.

- Evaluate evidence and arguments critically or analytically.

Students will produce individual essays and may be assigned term papers or group reports (at the discretion of the instructor), all of which require using evidence to support conclusions. This is a departmental requirement for the final exam; at least 50% of that exam must consist of written material in essay format that includes a critical, evaluative, or analytical component.

- Produce well-reasoned written or oral arguments using evidence to support conclusions.

A course in this area (II.B) must meet at least three of the additional learning outcomes in the right column. A student will:

This course addresses U.S. History since 1920 and familiarizes students with how this period is studied in various disciplinary and inter-disciplinary traditions. Readings and other materials (i.e. video, film, music, maps, graphs, etc.) include works of history, cultural studies, history, political science, U.S. literature, art, media and journalism..

- Identify and apply the fundamental concepts and methods of a discipline or interdisciplinary field exploring the U.S. experience in its diversity, including, but not limited to, anthropology, communications, cultural studies, economics, history, political science, psychology, public affairs, sociology, and U.S. literature.

Students will use the course readings and independent student assignments to address the issues of the history and development of the

- Analyze and explain one or more major themes of U.S. history from more than one informed perspective.

United States from a variety of informed perspectives. Specific themes include different positions on isolationism and greater involvement in world affairs; pro-and anti-war expressions in American culture; conservative and liberal forces in contemporary politics; and others.
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Evaluate how indigenous populations, slavery, or immigration have shaped the development of the United States.
A key element of this course is the international role of the United States, including the development of the U.S. as a world power in the 20th century, wars including WWI, WWII and Vietnam, and the Cold War period; the development and history of détente; the changing role of the U.S. in Middle East conflicts; the consequences of increased global tensions and terrorism on United States policies.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Explain and evaluate the role of the United States in international relations.
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Identify and differentiate among the legislative, judicial, and executive branches of government and analyze their influence on the development of U.S. democracy.
The period covered by this course provides a treasure trove of material on race relations (during the Harlem Renaissance, Civil Rights movements, black militance, and contemporary American Latino and Asian populations), gender (WWII 'Rosie the Riveter,' feminism, wage gap, etc.), sexual orientation (Freudianism and the 1920s, Stonewall, and today), and other subjects of social differentiation. Students are asked to address at least two of these subjects through various reading and writing assignments.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Analyze and discuss common institutions or patterns of life in contemporary U.S. society and how they influence, or are influenced by, race, ethnicity, class, gender, sexual orientation, belief, or other forms of social differentiation.
