ACC 3100: Cost Accounting (4 credit course)

BULLETIN DESCRIPTION:

This course explores manufacturer cost concepts, including overhead application, and systems of accounting for job-order-costing and process costing. Direct costing will be used in performing cost-volume-profit analysis. Examination will be conducted of budgets and variances between actual and standard results. Differential analysis will be conducted to determine favorable outcomes.

STUDENT OBJECTIVES:

1. Distinguish between financial, managerial and cost accounting.
2. Identify normal, standard, and actual costs.
3. Distinguish between direct and indirect labor and material.
4. Define process costing and identify the steps in a process costing system.
5. Compute factory overhead application rate.
6. Distinguish between a manufacturing and merchandising entity

Concept Overview Videos are short videos with multiple choice question following each video. Each chapter has approximately 15-20 videos.

Smartbook is your e-book with key information highlighted for you and practice multiple choice questions. You can alternate between the reading and questions or the reading first and then the questions. The software will keep generating new questions if you get the questions wrong.

Homework is review assignments from the Connect software included with your e-textbook and are graded automatically. You have unlimited attempts.

Quiz is like the homework assignments. You have one attempt and the quiz is timed.

Midterm and Final are exams on a group of chapters. The midterm covers chapters 18,19,20, and 21. The final covers chapters 22,23,24, and 25. The midterm and final are timed and you have one attempt.

All the above assignments must be accessed through Brightspace.
